

Simulated Moving Bed Chromatographic Apparatus

The present invention relates to simulated moving bed chromatographic apparatus capable of implementing non-steady state operations by dynamically switching flow rates from one node to the next thus efficiently separating different components of a mixture dissolved in liquid medium based on adsorption affinities of each component. The apparatus maintains the internal flow rate by pumping desired amount of mobile phase into each column.

Patent Application no. 1947/MUM/2015